ADMIRAL DARLAN, THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF DEFENSE FORCES OF FRANCE, IS IN AMERICAN HANDS, EITHER AS PRISONER OR POTENTIAL ALLY; U. S. MEN SWEEP INTO ORAN

Pétain Takes Over Darlan's Post As Commander of French Forces — Hitler, Mussolini and Laval Are In Emergency Consultation at Rome, Reuter's Agency Reports, Although Report Is Not Confirmed

By International News Service

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Admiral Jean Francois Darlan, commander in chief of the defense forces of France, is in American hands, either a prisoner or a potential ally, it was disclosed officially in London today as United States forces swept into the great Algerian port and naval base of Oran.

The possibility that Darlan has chosen the alternative and has swung to the Allied side was enhanced by a Vichy radio announcement that Chief of State Marshall Henri Philippe Pétain has taken over Darlan's post as commander of all sea, land and air forces of France.

With an obvious disinclination to discuss the matter in detail, a spokesman at Allied military headquarters in London merely said:

"Darlan is in Algiers and is being entertained with all the respect and dignity due his rank and record."

The French admiral's "entertainment" is Lieut. Gen. Dwight David Eisenhower, commander of the American military operations in the European theater of war and leader of the invasion of West and North Africa expected shortly to surge across the border of Tunisia.

Meanwhile Vichy announced that Oran had been entered by American tank forces which planted the Stars and Stripes at a point 250 miles west of surrendered Algiers.

Heavy fighting continued at Casablanca on the Atlantic coast of Morocco, where carrier borne American dive bombers went into action against the port and its defenses as ground troops closed in.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Adolf Hitler, Premier Mussolini and Pierre Laval of France are in emergency consultation at Rome, Reuter's News Agency reported from the French frontier today.

Laval, according to the report, was said to have left Vichy yesterday for the meeting.

British officials did not discredit the report in its entirety, but had no confirmation and advised awaiting better information.

It was regarded doubtful that Hitler would travel as far south as Rome when a meeting could have been arranged at the Brenner Pass or some other likely spot.

Plans Being Made For Funeral of Young Sailor

MORRISVILLE, Nov. 10.—Plans are being made for the funeral of a United States sailor, who either jumped or fell from a train as it sped west from here early yesterday morning.

A brother of the victim, Joseph F. O'Loughlin, yesterday telephoned Bucks County officials, giving a few more details regarding O'Loughlin. His age was stated as being 26, and it was learned that he was enroute to Baltimore, Md. The young man was single. A "buddy" was with O'Loughlin on the train. Details as to just what happened were not available.

O'Loughlin's body was found along the tracks of the Penna. Railroad, his head being crushed when he struck the concrete base of one of the uprights which support the high tension line. The body was removed to a funeral home here.

INSTALLED AS PRES'T.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Slack, Bath street, spent Thursday evening in Philadelphia, where Mrs. Slack was installed as president of the Dechert Auxiliary of the United Spanish War Veterans.

OUTLINES A PORTRAIT OF AN AMERICAN BOY

Writes Essay in Observance of American Education Week

BY CATHERINE DUGAN

In observance of American Education Week, which is being marked at Bristol high school, one of the pupils, Catherine Dugan, of 11-C, has written the following article on the subject of "Establishing a Sturdy Character—The Portrait of an American Boy."

He began school at the age of six. He did not know how to salute the American flag correctly. He was a "smart kid." He was the kind who didn't want to go to school. After being forced to go the first few weeks, he soon found that he couldn't get out of it. He went, but he said he wouldn't learn a thing.

Time passed, now he is in the fifth grade. He is still one of the "smart kids" but this time it is smartness in school work. He knows how to salute the flag and many other things that growing boys are taught. He doesn't steal his work from the kid across the aisle as he did in third grade. He doesn't bully the smaller children, but he helps them to learn and to like school. Still later, he is entering high school. He is first in his class. He knows his history, civics, English, and other subjects. He takes his part in any debate. He can stand before a group and say what he thinks.

He is grown up now, a senior in high school. He is president of the Senior Class. Sure, he goes out on dates. He can get in with a crowd. Well liked. Why not? He has character.

Mr. and Mrs. James Roarty and daughter Sally, New Castle, Del., visited Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Roarty, Pine street, on Saturday.

80 Visit Bristol High School On Parents' Night

Approximately 80 mothers and fathers of pupils in Bristol high school, took advantage of "Parents' Night" last evening, and visited Bristol high school between 7.30 and 8.30 o'clock. "Parents' Night" was held in conjunction with American Education Week. Grades eight to 12 were in session, and parents thus had an opportunity of visiting various classrooms. Teachers also had opportunity of individual consultation with the parents of those they teach, learning more of the personality of their students.

A remarkable scope of knowledge of school problems was shown in the panel discussion. "Is Bristol High School able to fill the needs of a free man in a democratic community?"

DREAM OF 2 YOUTHFUL COWBOYS IS SHATTERED

Were "En Route" To Arizona On Two Steeds When Apprehended

ARE HALTED IN PHILA

Visions of a future as cowboys in Arizona — of hard riding across the plains — of negotiating steep mountain trails — of the branding season — visions of twirling lassos — all were shattered for a Croydon youth and a West Bristol lad when Philadelphia police officers "tracked them down" on Saturday. When the boys were halted, practically at the start of their "Westward Ho" jaunt, there were also halted their two steeds.

It was a grand and glorious dream—but it didn't last long!

Instead of the wide open spaces of the Mid-West, purple-headed mountains in the distance, and hazy green of sage-brush stretching for miles, the two would-be cowboys saw only the tall buildings of Philadelphia's business section in the distance, heard the rumble of city traffic, and tried their best not to ride down any pedestrians.

The two, James Gross, H. Croydon, and Russell Short, 14, West Bristol, were reported missing late Friday.

COUNCIL DISCUSSES BILL RECEIVED FOR CONTROL CENTER

Borough Asked To Pay 43% of Cost of Center and Four Information Posts

TOTAL OF BILL IS $946

Matter is Referred to Finance Committee to Report Back At Next Meeting

Bills received by Bristol Borough Council from the Bucks County Council of Defense for Bristol's share of the cost of equipping and operating the Bristol Control Center came up for considerable discussion last night at a meeting of Borough Council. The bill was for $946.

It was stated that the cost of equipping and operating the Bristol Center which serves a large portion of lower Bucks County is to be divided with Bristol paying 43 per cent; Bristol Township, 25 per cent; Bensalem Township 29 per cent; and Tullytown Borough three per cent. Then in addition to this Bristol Borough is asked to pay 43 percent of the cost of four information posts, estimated at $400 each, which are located in the area.

Councilmen gave the subject considerable discussion and finally tabled the bills until next meeting, so as to afford more time in which to ascertain the details and just how much more expense there is likely to be. Bristol Borough is now furnishing, rent free, and with heat and light free, the quarters for the Bristol Control Center in the Municipal Building.

The bills were referred to the Finance Committee of Council for checking and to report back to Council, as a whole, at the December meeting.

Police reported making 32 arrests during the month of October. The cases were disposed of in the following manner: Discharged, two; continued, four; held for court, seven; turned over to other police, two; fined, 11; committed to prison, six.

Two doors were found unlocked, ten lights reported out, 43 tramps given shelter. Eleven motorists were fined for all-night parking and two were discharged. The radio car answered 79 alarms. There was a total of $51 turned over to the borough from fines collected by justices from police cases.

A group of property owners along Green Lane, between Wilson avenue and Farragut avenue, petitioned for a street light. The request was referred to street and highway committee with power to act.

Councilman Conklin inquired what progress was being made in having the P. R. R. improve the train service to and from Bristol. It was stated by Councilman William H. Fine that the Exchange Club and Burgess Anderson were still endeavoring to have the service improved.

Councilmen absent were Vandegrift, Mitchener, Galzerano, Clark, Ratlike, Roche and Mulligan.

WAR LEADERSHIP

War Production Board Chairman Donald Nelson asked the newspapers to lead a scrap metal collection drive after he was informed what one newspaper had done in Nebraska. At his request, the Newspapers' Scrap Metal Drive Committee was formed by newspaper publishers and sent into action.

Several days ago Chairman Nelson had the following to say in an address to the newspaper publishers: "The job that the newspapers have done is absolutely unprecedented in the country. The results surpassed the fondest hopes that I entertained when I asked the publishers to come in a few weeks ago and discuss the problem of our material shortage and how the newspapers could help."

So much for the job and the praise. But it is hoped that the administration has learned something from this experience. If it will analyze the achievement it will find that the scrap was badly needed and the proof of its need was offered by manufacturers and other experts, not by politicians. It will find, also, that the appeal was so directed as to show the people that they were feeding the scrap directly to the armed forces by way of mill and factory. There was never any question about the American people's response to a true appeal for help in a good cause.

If the Administration in Washington will learn from this experience that the people crave frank, sincere and quick-acting leadership, and if it can forget politics and state socialism long enough to summon the strength necessary to act on this leadership discovery, it will get along better—much better—with the war.

SMALL BUSINESS

Recent lays have unveiled a gloomy picture for the proprietors of small businesses, especially retailers. Department of Commerce business experts testified at a hearing conducted by the Small Business Committee of the Senate that about 300,000 small retail stores will be closed next year because of lack of stock. The same prospect is faced by many small manufacturers who can not convert to war production. Gasoline rationing will have a chaotic effect on much small business.

Some small hope for the future was offered by War Production Board Chairman Nelson in a recommendation to Congress that steps be taken immediately for helping small business war casualties to soften the blow of suspension and to aid them in reentering business after the war. He said that the demands of a return to a sound economy after the war compel the government to give some thought now to carrying on the progressive American business policy of providing "more and better goods for all of us at continually lower prices."

The hope, worthy as it is, and sustained as it is by a sound adherence to the basic American principle of free enterprise, is not very stimulating to the small business man who knows that he will have to make drastic adjustments during the next fourteen months. Many of these men will find a use for their abilities in some phase of the war effort. Their employees may be provided for in the coming allocation of manpower.

But, as Mr. Nelson argued, they should not be mustered out. They should be merely demobilized for the duration, and provision should be made to help them resume business after the war.

BRISTOL THEATRE

As three people who make life more exciting, love more precious, laughter more joyous, Cary Grant, Joan Arthur and Ronald Colman are "The Talk of the Town!"

Each star is personally exciting during the unrelenting of "The Talk of the Town," at the Bristol Theatre. Grant is seen as a fugitive from justice, Colman as the candidate for the Supreme Court Bench who befriends him, and Miss Arthur as the warm-hearted, lovely young woman who shares their romantic adventures.

RITZ THEATRE

Lionel Atwill, who portrays his far-far role, that of a scientist-physician, in "The Mad Doctor of Market Street," coming today to the Ritz Theatre, was doing an operating scene for the film when he himself called a halt to the action.

Miss Irene Hervey, currently playing the title role in "Frisco Lil," now showing at the Ritz Theatre, is the daughter of an artist and she studied art at Venice, Calif., high school, where Myrna Loy also was a pupil.

The Great Game of Politics

eral pay rolls hundreds of thousands of new jobholders; that these come from all over the country; that they all draw salaries; that they are all at home and, presumably, all vote "right."

THEN, one eminent publicist, not, however, connected with the Administration, used the returns as an excuse for lecturing Mr. James A. Farley upon his temerity in daring to oppose the President's choice for the New York Democratic gubernatorial nomination and expressed the belief that the defeat of Mr.

Farley's candidate, Mr. Bennett, was in the interests of "orderly government." Aside from the difficulty of following this kind of logic, this writer is evidently unaware that early last summer Mr. Farley came to Washington, consulted with his "titular leader," found that the titular leader had no choice for the nomination.

THEREUPON, Mr. Farley then urged Mr. Bennett and left the White House under the clear impression that Mr. Bennett was acceptable to the President. These happen to be the facts and they were quite well known at the time. The President's candidate—Senator Meade (in no way better than Mr. Bennett) only emerged later and only after the American Labor Party leaders had been to the White House for conferences. The further fact seems ignored that though Mr. Farley's candidate was beaten, Mr. Farley comes out of the fight with honor, his reputation enhanced as a politician who plays the game on the level, is true to his word and his friends, never deals in the double cross. His future in New York and national politics remains to be seen but, at any rate, he has nothing of which to be ashamed.

OF course, the most surprising reaction anywhere came from the President and the Vice-President. In its lack of realism, the flippancy of the former's remark about his Hyde Park polling place is exceeded only by the absurdity of Mr. Wallace's contention that the great Republican gains by which practical control of Congress is lost to the Administration, shows the people to be pleased with the Roosevelt management of the war, and the President to be more popular than ever. It is hard to imagine a grown man seriously making to foolish a argument.

IT is disappointing that the President is unable to take so clear an expression of popular feeling in a more sober and thoughtful mood. It is too bad that he could not find it in him to concede that there was, perhaps, some justification for public discontent; that things could be improved; that now the election is over, they would be. In particular, it is unfortunate that he does not now try to establish a better relationship with Republican leaders, in Congress and out. It is a pity he does not see in the result a chance to appeal to them to use their new access of power for closer cooperation with him, promising more consultation on policies and a more reasonable attitude toward justified criticism, more receptiveness to counsel from those outside his own circle.

INSTEAD, Mr. Roosevelt, at his Friday press conference seemed to brush all these considerations aside. He appeared to see in the returns no evidence of a popular desire for more competency. He seemed determined to proceed along his own lines, as though the result had been a Democratic victory instead of an unforeseen reverse. This is disappointing. If the President sees in the election no reason to alter his attitude on anything and if his Vice-President sees in it nothing but a vote of complete confidence, then there is trouble ahead. For no one else constrains the returns in that way and the next Congress, with a clear anti-Administration majority (counting the anti-New Deal Democrats like Senator Byrd), is not apt to tolerate it. If that is to be the White House attitude, instead of the legislative and executive branches pulling together next year, they will be pulling apart, which will be bad. Senator Vandenberg's suggestion of a "victory coalition" is a sound one. There ought to be some White House response to that but none has been forthcoming.

ter, sturdy character, and he has education, a broad education.

He was graduated with honors and after leaving school, he secured a permanent position in an office. That was in June, 1941. He had a good job and people looked up to him. He would soon be a leading citizen, they thought, for he helped in community work wherever and whenever he could.

Six months went by and we know why he and hundreds of other boys joined the American Armed Forces and why he went through rigorous training and studying—the country had been unwillingly dragged into war. He studied, trained and then waited until at last his chance came. He could go to the front line to fight for his country.

He's not afraid. He knows what to do and he has the American people behind him, buying stamps and bonds and working in defense factories.

Men and women like him have a sturdy character and are using it to keep up the morale of the communities, while boys like him are keeping up the morale of the fighting men.

He is one of the thousands of our boys fighting. There are other thousands too young fighting on the home front, patriotic Americans who are going to school to keep the light of freedom burning.

GIRL IN THE GREEN COAT by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER THIRTY

I dialed the office. Josh was just leaving, but he came back to answer the telephone.

"I thought you'd left town. Have you seen the Express?"

"No, not yet!"

"Well, Hall has a whale of a story. Of course you got the confession and I'm not snatching any of your orchids, Mary, but that guy was THERE! He's got a whale of a yarn about seeing Raymond walking around in her nightgown washing her hands, kind of Lady Macbeth, when he blew in looking for Proust. As long as you haven't gone you might try and get a statement from Proust—I haven't been able to locate him. It seems that Hall—"

I let him tell me the story. The story I should have told him. The story I kept silent on to shield my FRIEND Hall!

"Listen," I said, "The reason that you didn't find Proust in his studio or at the hotel is because he's out celebrating his engagement to my room-mate, Peggy Hudson. . . Uh-huh, Hudson, H, as in heel, n, d, s, o, n. . . Yes, I can get pictures. I'll write the story too if you want, but I thought it could go as a fudge on the Final Night, and I'll give you the rest for tomorrow. . ."

Jan was looking at me, hurt and reproachful.

Peg was mad she was crying.

"Mary, that's the dirtiest trick I ever heard of. It just HAPPENED last night. We weren't going to announce it yet! Oh you make me so mad, so mad! You'd tell anything—ANYTHING just to SCOOP somebody!"

"Oh no, I wouldn't. I mean I wouldn't before, but I will now. Do you know what that Hall did? Told that yarn of his—the one I held back about his being in Jan's studio and seeing Emily in the green housecoat, only it's turned into a nightgown now—a chiffon nightgown probably—and it's smeared all over the Express. And then he has the nerve to tell me, to tell ME—"

I really was scared and ashamed of what I'd done to Peg and Jan. It wasn't their fault, and maybe they didn't want to tell it yet. I began to cry, too.

There was a knock on the door and I opened it. It was old Mr. Strom, with Mrs. Strom just behind him, her little grey crocheted shawl over her shoulders.

"Excuse me," he said, "I guess we wouldn't have come. We read the papers. We just wanted to say how sorry—"

"Mr. and Mrs. Strom," he said, "it is not all sadness here. I am happy you are the first except Mary to know—Peggy and I—we are going to be married!"

"That's right," Peg said. She wiped her eyes. "Jan, are there any more cocktails?"

She kissed me, "Never mind, Mary, I don't mind everybody knowing—not if Jan doesn't."

Jan clicked his heels and kissed her hand, and it was very romantic and the Stroms were thrilled—they're such old dears anyway. So then I got the envier, we'd been saving for something special off the top shelf, and Jan went downstairs for more stuff for cocktails. In the hall he met Sam Utz and his wife, and slapping each other on the back. McMurphy and Miss Martin, and they all came back with him, and it turned into a real party with everyone pumping everyone else's hand, and slapping each other on the back. Sam Utz got very tight and began singing, "Oh Proust, Me," very much off key, so Madame Hurd and Mr. McMurphy couldn't stand that, and they began singing too, and one thing led to another.

So the next thing we knew Frank Heney, our camera man blew in, to take pictures of Peg and Jan. Then it was ten minutes to eight, and my plane leaving at eight-thirty, and my ticket to pick up at the airport and everything!

Frank drives like a demon anyway, so he packed Peg and Jan and me and all my bags into his car, along the Bayshore highway I bal-typewriter, and while we roared along the Bayshore highway I bal-typed the engagement story for Frank to take in to the office, along with his pictures.

I finished just as we turned into the airport and, while I dashed for the ticket, Jan took care of the bags. There was the plane, all silvery and shiny waiting to take off, with people saying good-byes, and everything beautiful and clear and starry after the rain.

"Three minutes," Frank panted, "just time for one quickie, to drink to the bride and groom!"

We dashed into the bar, all of us out of breath and me wishing I were safely aboard, worried to death that the plane would go off without me while Frank reeled off an elaborate and flowery toast and as people rushed in and out, I could hear the sound of the motor tuning up.

Jan took me by the arm and somebody pulled me up the steps. The stewardess led me up front to an empty seat.

Peg and Jan and Frank were waving, and I waved back. We taxied around in a great circle and back down the runway again. Then I felt the plane lifting, and we were on our way in the quiet night, the lights of the airport far below.

I leaned back and sighed. I was on my way. I was clear of the roller building. I was going to forget everything that had happened, and relax.

I shut my eyes. When I opened them the man across the aisle was handing me a paper.

"No, thank you," I said, "I really—"

Chris Hall, handing me an Express, and grinning like a Cheshire cat!

"You hung up on me this afternoon, and my feelings were very hurt, but since we're traveling companions—"

"Very nice," I said, handing it back.

"Thank you. Yours was very nice, too."

Australian Tenor To Sing At Concert Here Thursday

John Dudley, the young Australian tenor of the Metropolitan who sings here on Thursday evening at 8:30 o'clock in Bristol high school auditorium, made more appearances with the opera company last season—11 to be exact—than any other newcomer. This is his first extended concert tour of the United States.

Dudley was considered such a find that he was given a contract after his first trial appearance on the Metropolitan's "Auditions of the Air"—one of only two people to have ever had that happen. Some of the Met's most brilliant first-line singers, including Anna Kuskas and John Carter, have come to it via these auditions but Dudley and the French-Canadian, Raoul Jobin, are the only ones to have been grabbed up after a single try-out.

The concert here on Thursday evening is the first of this winter's series under the Cooperative Concert plan.

Dudley was born in Ballarat, the most musical city in Australia and seat of the famous "Ballarat Competitions" in which Melba, John Brownlee and Marjorie Lawrence have been victors. When John was eight years' old the family moved to Melbourne after a stop-over of several years in the seaport city of Geelong. In Melbourne Dudley and his two brothers—he is the middle in age—grew up as near-neighbors to Premier Menzies and not far from the home of Billy Hughes, Australia's premier in the last war.

Dudley's father had a fine baritone voice, having once been runner-up to the great Australian ballad singer, Peter Dawson, in the Ballarat Competitions. Though never in music professionally—he became Secretary of the Metropolitan Fire Brigades Board in Melbourne—Dudley's father and his three sons organized a quartet and were often asked to sing over the air.

As a child of six John Dudley was stood upon the dining room table to sing and his two most popular numbers were "Yankee Doodle" and "Waltzing Matilda," the Australian ballad which General Wavell's Anzacs have made world famous.

Until he was through college Dudley's only singing teacher was his father. Afterwards he coached with a professional but still only as a hobby. An enthusiast for the outdoor life he hoped eventually to own a sheep ranch.

In 1930 Dudley, at the age of 26, was a young manufacturer in Melbourne. In that year the noted baritone, Apollo Granforte, visited Melbourne and heard Dudley in a private audition. When the audition was over Granforte was spluttering with rage. It took several minutes to find out that it was not because he thought Dudley was bad but because he thought he was so good. The idea of anybody with a voice like that keeping it in hiding, Granforte not only spoke his mind to Dudley but to the Melbourne newspapers as well. As a result the young manufacturer awoke next morning to find the whole town exercised over this remarkable talent which was going to waste in their midst.

Mr. Dudley's program on Thursday will be divided into six groups.

(By the Rev. James R. Galley)

Eternal God, our Father, unseen, but ever near, we pray thy blessing upon the men and women who are serving in the forces of our Nation. Their sacrifice is supreme. They have severed ties which have existed throughout their lives; they have given up so much they hold dear, in order that they might give themselves for the preservation of our freedom. Bless them, O God, with courage and confidence. Enable them to depend upon them, rather than upon the might of man. Guide them in their thinking, that through it all they might comprehend the working out of thy will. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Here are TWO WAYS to help win!

You Can Win A $25 War Savings Bond

BY WRITING 25 WORDS OR LESS

JUST FINISH THIS SENTENCE:

"My family is drinking more milk today because"

You know what War Savings Bonds can do to help win the war. But do you know that family health is also important to our Victory program? Be sure you follow correct nutritional rules—including plenty of milk.

Milk provides many vitamins and minerals to aid working efficiency. And it also helps reduce those wartime nerves that come from today's living under wartime pressure.

For milk contains several times as much calcium as any other common food — in readily assimilable form. This all-important mineral regulates the irritability of tissues and relaxes muscles.

Thousands of families are drinking more milk to help build up health. You may win a $25 War Savings Bond by finishing the above sentence, outlining why you think this is important today.

An easy way to get your family to like milk is to serve Supplee Sealtest Homogenized Vitamin D Milk. Tastes better and is better for the whole family. Order from your Supplee milkman, your neighborhood store or phone Bristol 2117.

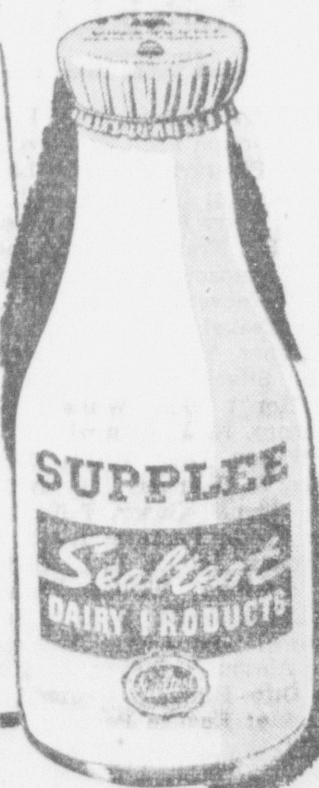

Tune in Tuesdays to the Supplee program, "STARS IN THE MAKING," an enjoyable hour's fun and music. Station WTIM at 8 P. M.

BRISTOL SOPHOMORE ELEVEN WINS OVER MORRISVILLE TEAM

Local School Team Scores A 13 to 0 Triumph Over Rivals

SECOND OF THE SEASON

In the Previous Tilt the Two Teams Deadlocked At 6 to 6

MORRISVILLE, Nov. 10.—A strong second half finish gave the Bristol High School sophomore eleven a 13-0 triumph over the Morrisville High School sophomores here yesterday afternoon. It was the second meeting of the teams, a previous game resulting in a 6-6 deadlock.

Bristol's first score came in the third period and was the result of a 25 yard forward pass, Messinelli to Paoletti. After this touchdown, Collins place-kicked the extra point.

Not contented with the 6-0 lead, Coach Charlie Utz's boys again went to work in the final period and with a sustained march reached Touchdownland. An end run reverse with Bigelow carrying the ball scored the touchdown.

Coach Utz used the following players in the Bristol lineup: ends, Licari, Paoletti, Snyder; tackles, Feole, Paoletti; guards, Caucci, Walters, Nysse, Costantini; backs, Oriola, Collins, Bigelow, Baradis, Demidio and Messinelli.

advance on Paris during which engagement the Marines earned their sobriquet of "Devil Dog." The French army cited the Marine units no less than six times in army battle orders and for this they were awarded the famous French fourragere in the colors of the Croix de Guerre, one of the most highly prized decorations awarded to the Americans in France. At the close of the war individual Marines had been awarded over 1,568 decorations, American and Allied. Since the World War the Marines have been compelled to serve in Nicaragua to assist in settling disturbances in that country and were finally removed in 1933. Coming down to the present war we are all familiar with the glorious stands made by the Marines at Wake Island, Guam, Midway and now in the Solomons. As long as this country has battles to fight, world policing to do or honor to be upheld, our country's fathers will always "tell it to the Marines."

GRAND THEATRE

It would seem, offhand, that you don't have to be a Lindy hopper to get all hopped up about "Orchestra Wives," the hilarious musical that comes to the Grand Theatre today.

First of all, the picture stars the band that for three successive years has been voted America's most popular band in a poll conducted by authoritative "Billboard" magazine. That's Glenn Miller, of course, and his talented crew of instrumentalists and vocalists.

Then there is George Montgomery, lately one of the "Ten Gentlemen From the Brigade de Marine" in honor of West Point. He's a handsome lad, a the Marines who wrested it from the trumpet player, with one foot in the Germans in June 1918 and barred their groove and the other in matrimony.

DAILY, including Sundays and Holidays

Says Major General C. P. Gross, Chief of Transportation of the United States Army:

"Transportation is the life blood of this Great Army."

"Night and day the railways have been on the job, consistently meeting increasingly difficult requirements, for freight and passenger equipment and service. They have done a superb job."

Yes, night and day, including Sundays and holidays, the railroads of America have been speeding troops to wherever the Army commands!

In the first ten months alone, they have moved approximately 8,000,000 troops, not counting soldiers on leave.

That's over three times as many as they carried in the same period of the last war!

For all this, the credit goes jointly to the railroads, the War Department and the Office of Defense Transportation—it's a job of perfect coordination. When the need for quick mass movement of troops came, a plan, which experienced railroad men had been developing for twenty years, went instantly into operation. That's why Uncle Sam's war machine rolls!
